The nine-minute video was posted on the jihadist militant forum Vimeo on April 24 by a user with the pseudonym "The Martyr," the German news magazine Der Spiegel reported. "This is an extract from the book 'The Martyrdom of the Prophet Muhammad,'" a man reading from the book says. "The meaning of the words is becoming clearer," he says before saying that the book is "the most important book" and quote from "[Anas Ibn Malik], the confidant of the Prophet," reported Der Spiegel. The video then says "The book is banned in Saudi Arabia," and speaks about "communal genocide," "child terror," and "women oppression." Allegations of the Pakistani Taliban's intimate ties to al Qaeda continue to raise eyebrows. In December, Rehan Malik, a deputy to the Pakistani Taliban's top leader Hakimullah Mehsud, told The Associated Press that his organization served as a militant base for the Sunni al Qaeda. Malik said the Pakistani Taliban received money and logistical support from al Qaeda, which Pakistani officials say allows the Taliban to acquire U.S. weapons. The Associated Press notes that al Qaeda leader Ayman al-Zawahri has repeatedly praised the Pakistani Taliban and said 09e8f5149f
